Tony Keys – The Key Report

2015 Anaperenna, 95 Points

No shrinking violet, this wine. But then no great brute either. It's taut, tight, and rich, so very rich. One knows it's naughty, but as is the case with all naughty excesses, willpower is fickle and weak and stands no chance.

John Fordham – The Sunday Telegraph

2015 Anaperenna

Another example of the mastery of red blending, this time with Barossa Valley shiraz and cabernet sauvignon and gun winemaker Ben Glaetzer in the hot seat. When blended table wines first seriously came into vogue in the 1950s, these were the varieties that provided the magic. Thankfully, nothing's changed.

Nicks Wine Merchants

2015 Anaperenna, 97 Points

Magnificent colour displaying an impenetrable inky black core with an equally deep dark purple black hue. Heady aromas of blackberry, liquorice and ripe blackcurrant waft from the glass underscored by subtle vanillin cedar and tobacco characters, a faint whiff of mocha and spice. Decadently rich and opulent in its textural feel yet in perfect balance the palate is dripping with black fruit flavours of liquorice, blackberries and cassis over vanillin cedar, traces of tobacco and spice. A sturdy tannin structure largely unnoticeable beneath the huge core of fruit. Outstanding power with a very long aftertaste of liquorice, blackberries, cassis, vanillin cedar, light tobacco infusions and spice.

Wine Current

2015 Anaperenna, 5 Stars

Winemaker Ben Glaetzer leaves his experienced, confident fingerprints all over this. It showcases great depth, good balance, tang and complexity with good purity of fruit and firm underpinning, but not overworked or overblown. Involved aromas of baking spice, savory herbs, espresso roast and dark cherry/berry and plum fruit abound. A gusher of spice, ripe mulberry, black plum and black currant coat the palate infusing the lengthy, tang-laden, balanced finish and aftertaste. The ripe, fine-grained tannins are easily handled by opening 2020 to 2035 – an inspired choice for the cellar.
